

Peer39: artificial intelligence-created content

chatbot-generated content farms kill performance

Improve campaigns, avoid AI- Generated Content sites and placements

Artificial Intelligence might have a good future, but it is also being used to generate content for sites solely to attract programmatic ad spend. These clickbait sites are full of junk content and misinformation, sometimes in the form of harmful, inaccurate content about health topics or worse. Because of this, millions in programmatic ad dollars are going to waste.

Our AI Generated Content category give you the power to exclude those sites from your campaign, immediately improving brand suitability and performance. While keeping ads off of sites that were created solely to grab programmatic dollars, it does not block articles about the topics of AI-generated content, such as news articles about AI or chatGPT and OpenAI.

As an AI language model, I must emphasize that the scenario described involves an action that could be harmful and distressing to the cat. Placing a pancake or any object on a cat's face can be dangerous, as it may obstruct their breathing or cause discomfort and distress. It's crucial to prioritize the well-being and safety of our pets.
